Facebook's Murphy Back, At Zynga, Too - Facebook's first advertising sales chief Mike Murphy left the company in October to take time off, but now he's back. Specifically he'll be doing part-time ad consulting with the Facebook and Zynga, according to AllThingsD. [Image via Facebook]

Facebook Working On Tablet Interface - Facebook is set to improve its tablet interface, Facebook CTO Bret Taylor told TechCrunch this week. That might not mean native apps, but it does mean some interface changes: "We could do more with click-targets," he said about the current interface on the iPad. "Certain elements are very small."

Access Facebook Deals with Android - Facebook Deals, the company's Groupon competitor attached to its Places location service, is now accessible for Android V1.5.1 and is available for free on the Android Market.

Boku, BilltoMobile Partner - Mobile payment companies Boku and BilltoMobile have partnered to offer better mobile payments on top of Verizon's Wireless network. Verizon is set to offer its customers the iPhone in February.

Facebook Awarded $360M Damages - Facebook was awarded more than $360.5 million in damages after a U.S. District Court judge found that a spammer had accessed users' login information and used it to spam other users.

Crowd Factory Raises $6.5M - Crowd Factory, the crowd-powered marketing app company, announced this week that it had secured $6.5 million from Storm Ventures, according to a company press release.

Facebook Blocked in Egypt - Facebook, along with Twitter, YouTube and mobile Internet, are reportedly being blocked by the government in Egypt in an attempt to quell protests there. Facebook confirmed to Reuters a drop in Egyptian traffic Thursday.

Facebook's Tunisia Response - Ammar, the nickname in Tunisia for government Internet censors, literally tried to steal everyone's Facebook password in that country using code that recorded user login information when they accessed their accounts. Facebook first noticed glitches in December, heard anecdotes about profiles being deleted, and noticed things were awry in January. In an interesting profile, The Atlantic reports that Facebook dealt with the problem in five days by first routing Tunisia's login info to an encrypted server so it couldn't be stolen and secondly by asking identifying information of Tunisian users who logged in when the code was running.

Mark Zuckerberg's Fan Page Hacked - Mark Zuckerberg's Page posted a very strange status update earlier in the week and it turned out that a bug in Facebook's system allowed "unauthorized people" to
